Oops – what's gone wrong?

Injury: A driver was at Miller Foods and identified that it was not safe to use the site provided ladder to gain access to the wheat pit. The driver walked through the front of the pit and then applied the chain to control the flow and spillage of product. As the driver was exiting the pit area, he stepped over the chain and his foot contacted the chain causing him to fall forward onto the concrete surface sustaining multiple cuts and abrasions to the body. Millers Foods has as an interim control restricting truck drivers from entry to the wheat pit, ONLY employees are approved to access the wheat pit. Millers Foods has advised that they are making a new platform and drivers are encouraged to report any hazards or concerns via your in-vehicle hazards form.

Biosecurity Requirements Breach: Identified that not all drivers were performing the legible signing in or out requirements when attending AAA Egg farms. An MTData message was sent to the drivers to highlight the requirements. A draft SOP has been in place for all biosecurity requirements and awaiting additional information from AAA Eggs to support release to the truck drivers.

Refuelling Vehicles – PPE requirements: A few drivers have been sighted failing to comply with the PPE requirements when fuelling their vehicles at Hope Valley Depot and Wesfeeds. A SIN has been raised by our contractor and issued to Marley's for address of the identified breach. Attached to this month's Mail is the SOP and SDS for undertaking refuelling requirements for drivers and workshop teams. A copy of this has been released manually and electronically via a MTData message.
